the circumstances causing you not to meet the minimum requirements will no longer affect your ability to achieve. Examples of mitigating circumstances could include COVID-19, illness, or death of a close family